processing space. She addressed the challenges of implementation, such as inadequate infrastructure and limited access to markets, and provided recommendations for overcoming these barriers. Her presentation was well-received, with participants expressing interest in adopting best practices to enhance their operations.

Mr. Joshua Ocholi followed with a presentation on international standards in farming, focusing on the implementation challenges and necessary interventions. He highlighted the need for capacity building and access to technology as critical factors for improving agricultural productivity. His recommendations included the adoption of precision agriculture and climate-smart practices to increase yields and sustainability.

Participant Feedback

During the Q&A session, participants actively engaged with the speakers, sharing their experiences and challenges. Rukaya from Kano State emphasized the preference for organic fertilizers over inorganic options and introduced the Northern Women Organic Forum, which supports the production of organic farming inputs. Kabiro from Kano highlighted the challenges of inadequate funding and the need for agronomic training to improve yields and value chain addition.

The facilitators acknowledged the feedback, noting the importance of integrating these insights into the project proposal to ensure it addresses the real needs of the beneficiaries.

Conclusion

The webinar concluded with a closing session led by STF, where the key takeaways were summarized. The contributions from participants provided valuable input for the project's development, particularly in areas such as organic farming, value chain addition, and access to funding and training. The webinar successfully fostered a collaborative environment, ensuring that the final proposal will be robust, inclusive, and aligned with the goals of the Mastercard Foundation.

The insights gathered from this consultative webinar will be instrumental in shaping a project that not only meets the needs of the agricultural community but also drives sustainable economic growth and empowerment for young women, men, and marginalized groups in Nigeria.
